VAL-MATIC CASE STUDY

Val-Matic's latest case study "Savings Through Serviceability" demonstrates how you can save with an easily serviceable product. The City of Elgin began serving its residents as a community water supplier in the late 1880's using the Fox River. Since then they have adjusted how they supply water to residents from using a river to building a treatment facility because of the added demand. Their mission in their treatment facilities to have quality products that provide ease of maintenance led them to Val-Matic's American-BFV® Butterfly Valve where one of the trademark features is ease of serviceability.
